Sky Yan is the founder and CEO of LIS (Non-Profit Organization) .

He graduated from the National Cheng Kung University and majored in chemistry. He focuses on science education in primary and secondary schools and develops the O2O science textbooks to help science teachers improve their teaching ability.

With these materials, he hopes to flip the cramming education in Taiwan and cultivate children's scientific literacy. It currently affects 15% of all primary and secondary students in Taiwan.

At the same time, he served as a young advisor to the Taiwan government and provided government policy advice.
